Visit Nine Stores While Pickaway-Co Authorities Puzzle

That a gang of thieves is operating in Pickaway-co without apparently leaving a clue where-by county or local authorities can apprehend them was apparent again on Wednesday when it became known that either late Tuesday night or early Wednesday morning nine business houses of New Holland were entered.

The thieves evidently were hunting only for money as no merchandise was molested and only a small amount of change was found missing in all nine places.

Use Same System

The same system used in Ashville, Williamsport and Circleville robberies, cutting out window panes and panels from doors, was used in the robberies Tuesday night. Only in a few instances were rear windows forced open. The following stores were visited by the thieves Kirk's Furniture store, Gooley's department store, two restaurants, Ankrom's and Kennedy's, White's drug store, Jennings garage, White's garage, and two filling stations of Kirk's and Onhold's.

Loss Is Small

While in all four towns visited, only a small amount of cash was taken, it was only because businessmen had been careful to leave much money around at night, and authorities are worried over the persistent looting. Merchants in the city and county are urged not to keep any money on hands at night.

COMMERCE BODY HEAR TALK ON BIG WORLD WAR

Lieut. Lynch Gives Interesting Address—Other Matters Discussed

A vivid picture of the world war was painted for members of the Chamber of Commerce at its regular meeting Tuesday night when Lieut. Joseph Lynch was prevailed upon to tell of some of his experiences.

Mr. Lynch served in the Headquarters Machine Gun Co 42nd division, 166th regiment and this company faced all the rigors, trials and tribulations of the war in the battles of St. Mihiel, Chateau-Thierry and Argonne. He told of the preparedness that a member of the headquarters had to be put through in carrying messages, the danger of being knocked off by a "sniper," and many other thrills his company passed through. He graphically related the taking of "Hill 208" in the Argonne sector, after regiments 165, 197 and 208 had suffered tremendous fire of the Germans for nearly three weeks. Finally the mannes, with the help of artillery, came on and took the hill. The Infantry had waited in vain for the artillery assistance, which they had been promised, and the honor would have been theirs instead of the marines, had that arm of the service appeared on the scene earlier in the campaign.

The Argonne forest fight is where the flower of Ohio's sons were picked off and made the supreme sacrifice. Many a company of the 166th was decimated by the deadly fire of the Teutonic army. The taking of this hill practically broke the backbone of the German army, and led to the end of the war.

In closing Mr. Lynch told of the army of occupation in the enemy's country. He spoke of the excellent treatment given American soldiers by Germans. They were treated loyally, when the war was over. The French treated the Americans haughtily, as much so as to say, "We are through with you now, take the air."

Next Wednesday, May 23 at 11 o'clock a. m. in the Chamber of Commerce rooms, the board of directors are to hold a meeting.

Next week is "Know Ohio Week" and it is urged everyone post themselves on the history, topography and points of interest in this state.

George F. Grand-Girard thanked the Chamber for their liberal donation and their presence at his golden anniversary.

L. T. Shaner spoke of the Scotch rail blockade and detour that will be on in a few weeks for road repair. Traffic will be detoured around Jackson pike and he thought with a little pressure, traffic could be routed through this city. The matter was referred to the board of directors.

E. S. Neuding, the E. Main-st. grocer and distributor of White Star coffee, proposed that merchants in general close their places of business a half day Wednesday through the month of June July and August. A usual there was some objection and the matter was left open to merchants to do as they pleased.

Mr. Lynch asked the members of the Chamber of Commerce to act as a body Monday evening in the parade to honor the "Lost Out" boys. There was no objection to that and he was here tonight. It is only the hope that we can show them in a respectful and dignified way that we can do for them.

Note From Nanking Passes To Coolidge And Kellogg—Unmolested

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The Chinese protest against the Japanese occupation of Shantung has not altered the United States policy of "hands off" in the war crisis of the Orient.

The note from Nanking has passed from the White House—having been sent directly to President Coolidge—through the hands of Secretary of State Kellogg to the musty archives of the far eastern division.

Since the Nationalist regime at Nanking never has been recognized by the United States, this government has no obligation under diplomatic usage to acknowledge or reply to the document.

The southern Nationalist government vehemently protests the vigor of the Japanese action in Shantung describing the occupation as a flagrant encroachment upon Chinese sovereignty. The extreme vigor of the Japanese military action the text suggests indicates a political purpose beyond the mere protection of Japanese life and property in the war-torn Tsunafu area. Nanking calls upon the United States, as a party to the Washington treaty of 1922 guaranteeing the territorial integrity of China, to curb the Japanese.

Simultaneously with the Nanking Communication, the state department received the text of the Japanese defense of its action filed yesterday with the League of Nations secretariat at Geneva.

Although diplomatically important—for she has no friend save Russia—the southern Chinese government continues victorious in the field. With her advance troops now within fifty miles of Tientsin, the vital port of Peking, her armies have an open road to the forbidden city.

Quigg came to this city Sunday for the express purpose of calling on his child whom he had never seen and he was arrested for his trouble.

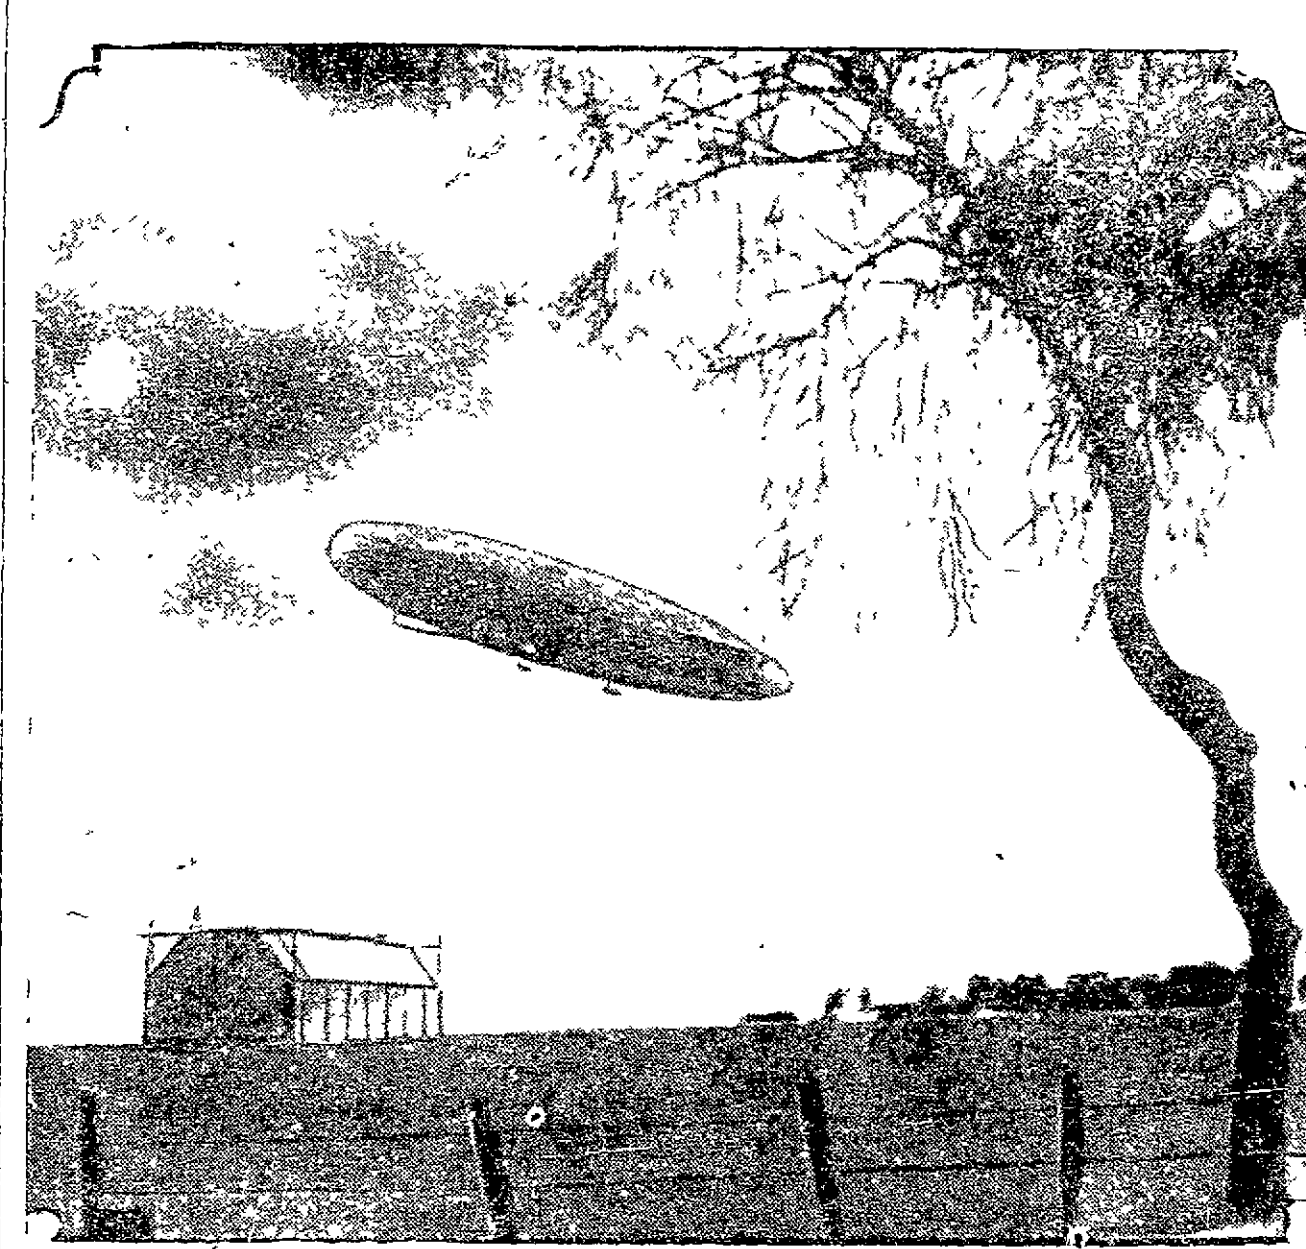

The father who has been in straightened circumstances is now holding a good position with a bonding company in Philadelphia and is also the manufacturer of a washing compound which he is placing on the market. He made quite a number of promises about contributing toward the child's support. The mother of the child secured a divorce from Quigg after his disappearance and returned to his home in New York. She is now Mrs. John McMeier.

COOLIDGE URGES IMPROVEMENT OF CITIES IN TALK

Oppressive Ugliness Of Small Towns And City Squalor Is Better, He Says

WASHINGTON, May 16.—President Coolidge, addressing a joint meeting of the American Federation of Arts and the American Association of Museums here today, drew an analogy from the homely about clothes making the man and urged a greater application of the arts to the expansion and growth of American cities.

"If clothes make the man—and certainly good dress gives one a sense of self-respect and poise—how much more is it true that clean, beautiful surroundings lend a moral tone to a community," he declared. "Gradually we are getting rid of the squalor of the slums of our big cities and of the oppressive ugliness of the small towns."

Mr. Coolidge gave much credit to the Washington plan commission, created in 1901 under the guidance of the late Senator James McMillan, of Michigan, for having started a national movement for more orderly and beautiful civic development and he noted that respect's had carried a long way toward betterment. "It is especially the practical side of art that requires more emphasis," he said, "for it is the daily life of the people. If we could surround ourselves with the forms of beauty, the art of the world, we would be better men and women."

Mr. Coolidge said that the art of the world is the art of the people. It is the art of the people that makes the world a better place. It is the art of the people that makes the world a more beautiful place. It is the art of the people that makes the world a more interesting place.

LEADS PILING UP AS STATES GIVE RETURNS

Primary And Convention Returns Show Trend Favoring Two Leaders

By George R. Holmes
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The overwhelming leads being rolled up by Herbert Hoover and Gov. Al Smith for their respective presidential nominations was further emphasized today by the results of primaries and conventions held in a number of states yesterday.

Hoover added delegates from three states, New Jersey, Alabama, and Montana, to his already imposing total. In New Jersey he is accorded the entire delegation of 31, in Alabama he is figured to have obtained 14 out of 15, and in Montana at least 4 out of 11.

Putting Pennsylvania's 79 votes in the Hoover column—as virtually all the politicians have done since the Mellon endorsement—it brings the Hoover total to above the 500-mark. The most reliable tables in Washington give his total as today as approximately 503 pledged, instructed or committed delegates. Only 545 are required to nominate. And in that total of 503 none have been figured from New York, where the Hoover managers claim at least 47.

Has Good Chance

From this compilation, it is apparent that if the secretary of commerce can hold his indicated strength during the next four weeks, it comes very close to being nominated on the first or second ballots. Whether this strength can be held is, of course, conjectural. The Hoover opposition contends that in this imposing total, there are perhaps 100 that cannot be considered bound irrevocably to the cabinet candidate. These 100 are described as "fluid," that is, favorable to Hoover, but liable to bolt if another bandwagon comes into view.

Only half a dozen states are still to select their delegates to the Kansas City convention, Florida, South Dakota, Texas, Vermont, West Virginia and Oregon. Oregon's are figured in the 508 as Hoover alone filed in the state, which automatically gives him the delegation. Florida and Texas are considered favorable Hoover territory. Vermont is doubtful, but probably for Hoover after a vote for Coolidge; and in West Virginia a primary will be held on May 29, with Hoover pitted against Senator Guy D. Goff, a favorite son.

On the Democratic side, Smith picked up delegates in New Jersey, Montana and Vermont yesterday. State conventions in Montana and Vermont instructed 16 delegates to vote for the New York governor at Houston, and there was no opposition to his getting the 28 from Jersey.

This brings the Smith total to date in pledged, instructed or committed delegates to approximately 575 in the capital's most reliable tables, and he has notable reserve strength that is not figured in that total, such as in Maryland and Ohio and Kansas. To nominate at Houston requires 724 votes.

The Democrats have been slower in selecting their convention delegates than the Republicans. There are thirteen states yet to designate their Houston delegates—Alabama, Colorado, Florida, Kentucky, Mississippi, New Mexico, North Carolina, Oregon, South Carolina, South Dakota, Texas, Virginia and West Virginia.

Francis Irwin Quigg who was arrested Sunday by officer McCrady on a warrant sworn out against him by his former wife, for desertion and non-support of their child was released from custody yesterday after the warrant was withdrawn by mutual understanding between the parties. The father promised to pay bills incurred by the plaintiff at the time of the child's birth, and also $5 per week for her support.

Quigg came to this city Sunday for the express purpose of calling on his child whom he had never seen and he was arrested for his trouble.

The father, who has been in straightened circumstances, is now holding a good position with a bonding company in Philadelphia and is also a manufacturer of a washing compound which he is placing on the market, made quite a number of promises about contributing toward the child's support. The mother of the child secured a divorce from Quigg after his disappearance and remarried. She is now Mrs. Marvin McAfee.

COOLIDGE URGES IMPROVEMENT OF CITIES IN TALK

Oppressive Ugliness Of Small Towns And City Squalor Is Better, He Says

WASHINGTON, May 16.—President Coolidge, addressing a joint meeting of the American Federation of Arts and the American Association of Museums here today, drew an analogy from the homely about clothes making the man and urged a greater application of the arts to the expansion and growth of American cities.

"If clothes make the man—and certainly good dress gives one a sense of self-respect and poise—how much more is it true that clean, beautiful surroundings lend a moral tone to a community," he declared. "Gradually we are getting rid of the squalor of the slums of our big cities and of the oppressive ugliness of the small towns."

Mr. Coolidge gave much credit to the Washington plan commission, created in 1901 under the guidance of the late Senator James McMillan, of Michigan, for having started a national movement for more orderly and artistic civic development and he noted that impetus had carried a long way, adding, however: "It is especially the practical side of art that requires more emphasis we need to put more effort into translating art into the daily life of the people. If we could surround ourselves with the forms of beauty, the evil things of life would tend to disappear and our moral standards would be raised."

LEADS PILING UP AS STATES GIVE RETURNS

Primary And Convention Returns Show Trend Favoring Two Leaders

By George R. Holmes
International News Service Staff
Correspondent

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The overwhelming leads being rolled up by Herbert Hoover and Gov. Al Smith for their respective presidential nominations was further emphasized today by the results of primaries and conventions held in a number of states yesterday.

Hoover added delegates from three states, New Jersey, Alabama, and Montana, to his already imposing total. In New Jersey he is accorded the entire delegation of 31, in Alabama he is figured to have obtained 14 out of 15, and in Montana at least 4 out of 11.

Putting Pennsylvania's 79 votes in the Hoover column—as virtually all the politicians have done since the Mellon endorsement—it brings the Hoover total to above the 500-mark. The most reliable tables in Washington give his total as of today as approximately 508 pledged, instructed or committed delegates. Only 545 are required to nominate. And in that total of 508 now have been figured from New York, where the Hoover managers claim at least 47.

Has Good Chance

From this compilation, it is apparent that if the secretary of commerce can hold his indicated strength during the next four weeks, it comes very close to being nominated on the first or second ballots. Whether this strength can be held is, of course, conjectural. The Hoover opposition contends that in this imposing total, there are perhaps 100 that cannot be considered bound irrevocably to the cabinet candidate. These 100 are described as "fluid," that is, favorable to Hoover but liable to bolt if another bandwagon hoves into view.

Only half a dozen states are still to select their delegates to the Kansas City convention, Florida, South Dakota, Texas, Vermont, West Virginia and Oregon. Oregon's are figured in the 508 as Hoover alone filled in the state, which automatically gives him the delegation. Florida and Texas are considered favorable Hoover territory. Vermont is doubtful, but probably for Hoover after a vote for Coolidge; and in West Virginia a primary will be held on May 29, with Hoover pitted against Senator Guy D. Goff, a favorite son.

Smith Shows Strength

On the Democratic side, Smith picked up delegates in New Jersey, Montana and Vermont yesterday. State conventions in Montana and Vermont instructed 16 delegates to vote for the New York governor at Houston, and there was no opposition to his getting the 28 from Jersey.

This brings the Smith total to date in pledged, instructed or committed delegates to approximately 578 in the capital's most reliable tables, and he has notable reserve strength that is not figured in that total, such as in Maryland and Ohio and Kansas. To nominate at Houston requires 734 votes.

The Democrats have been slower in selecting their convention delegates than the Republicans.

There are thirteen states yet to designate their Houston delegates—Alabama, Colorado, Florida, Kentucky, Mississippi, New Mexico, North Carolina, Oregon, South Carolina, South Dakota, Texas, Virginia and West Virginia.

FARM BUREAU AT COLUMBUS PLANS TO MOVE OFFICE

Headquarters Of Ohio Federation To Occupy New Building Soon

Headquarters of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation will be moved to the new Farm bureau building in Columbus on May 26, according to word just received at the office of the Pickaway County Farm Bureau. This, the announcement states will give ample time to get all of the offices arranged and in operation before the dedication of the building which will take place June 12.

Local farm bureau officers are urging as large an attendance as possible from the members and farmers of this county.

An attempt is being made to get all of the founders and early leaders in the state farm bureau movement to Columbus for the building opening ceremonies, says the word from state headquarters. The first committee named to form the organization was appointed in 1918. A year later, on January 28, 1919, delegates from county farm bureaus elected the first directors of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation.

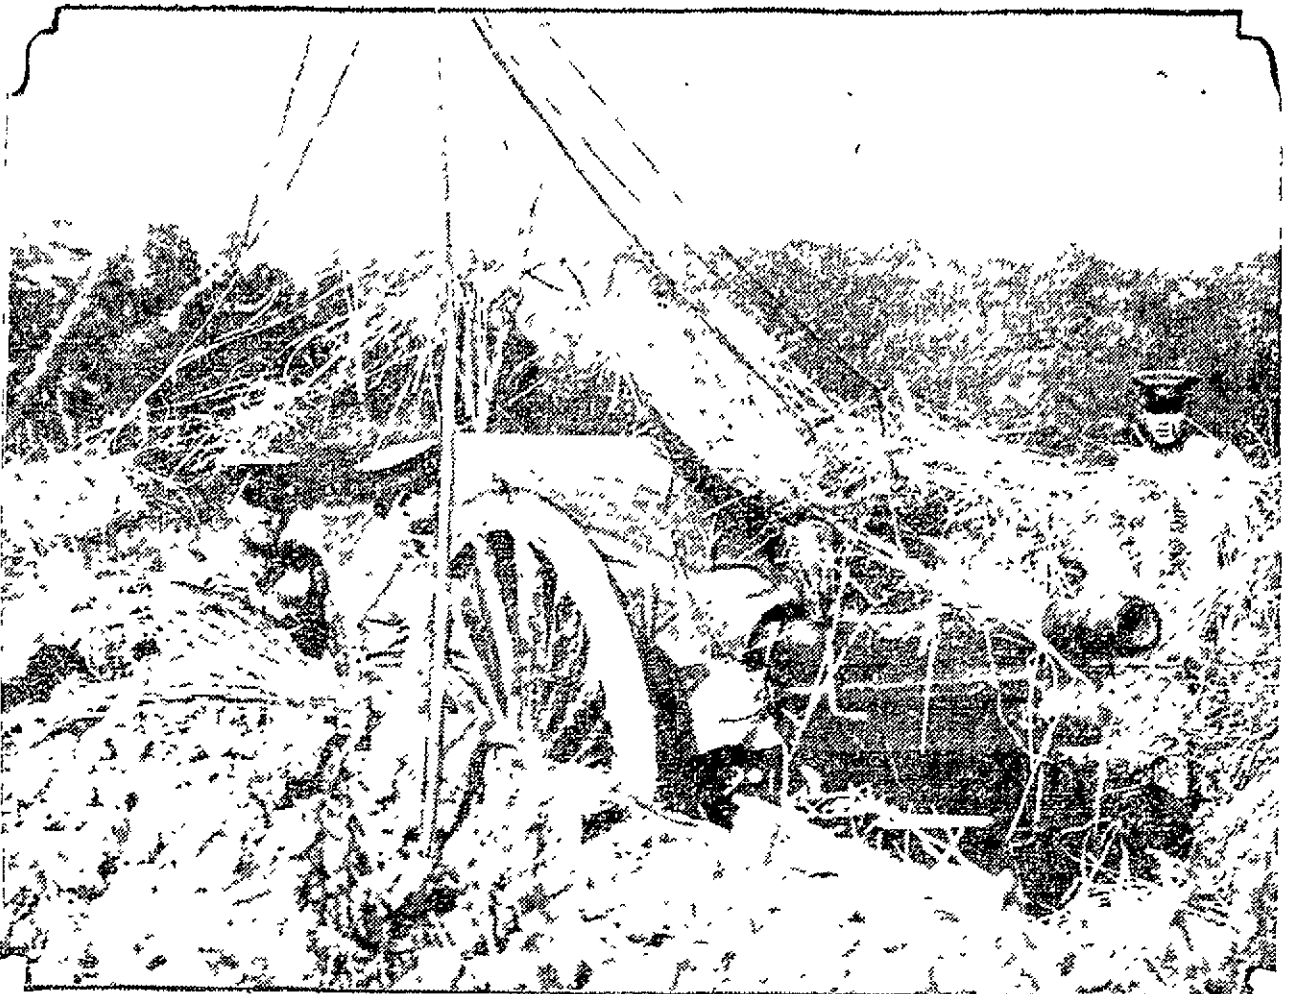

Of the nine directors chosen at that time, eight are living, and will be given honor places at the dedicatory exercises. These men are L. J. Taber, now master of the National Grange; George L. Coolidge, of Dover Center, familiarly known to thousands of Ohio farmers as "father of the Ohio farm bureau"; Harry G. Beale of Columbus, for several years treasurer of the organization; H. C. Rogers of Champaign county, the first secretary; O. E. Bradburn, former president of both the Ohio and American farm bureaus; H. P. Miller of Sunbury's Ohio's first county agricultural agent; Depeu Head of Columbus, and H. E. Shaver of Cheshire. Frank Balyeat of Van Wert, the other member of the original directorate, is deceased.

Speaking program at the building dedication will be held at 11 a.m. to be followed by luncheon at the new building.

MEG MALONE'S ADVICE

For a few months I have been going with a young man who seems to think a great deal of me and I like him very much. He is good looking and splendid company and seems well educated but he smokes incessantly and does not seem interested in church matters. I am afraid he will not measure up to my standard. What shall I do?
PRISCILLA Priscilla—

Here is my answer: A maiden once said to her father: "The man I marry must neither smoke, drink, gamble nor swear. He must be industrious affectionate, generous, sweet-tempered and truthful."

The father replied: "My dear, you're but a stranger here, Heaven is your home."

A great deal is said and written about the type of girl men choose for their wives.

It's all nonsense—the wiser and more particular a man is—the easier he is for some moon-eyed flapper to gather in. When love comes in at the heart common sense flies out of the cranium.

Then a few months after the knot is securely tied the man wakes up and finds him self fettered for life to a brainless mannequin. What's to be done? Divorce—probably or endless mortification and humiliation.

What a shame? Yes, but there is no remedy, for men have acted thus from prehistoric times and will continue so to act until Gabriel's horn ushers in the final judgment.

ALARM WAS FALSE

COLUMBUS, O., May 16.—"Another bank robbery?" That was the cry at police station here this morning when a burglar alarm call was received from the Commercial National bank in the heart of the downtown section here. Mrs. Hemans' Poem Had Foundation in Fact

Mrs. Hemans' poem, "The Boy Stood on the Burning Deck," which thrilled the imaginations, had its origin in an actual happening that constitutes a page in history. It was while Napoleon's expedition to Egypt was in progress that the English ship Lord Nelson, the sea's most famous warrior, to annihilate the fleet. This Nelson so nearly accomplished that only four of the French vessels escaped sinking or capture.

A bullet had ended the life of the French admiral, and the flagship was wrapped in flames. But Louis Casabianca, the captain, who was wounded so badly that he could keep his feet only by clinging desperately to the rail, stoutly refused to leave his post.

All who could get into a boat or swim had deserted the flagship and his heroic captain, with the solitary exception of a boy of ten—his son.

The lad had hidden behind a coil of rope until the last boat had gone, and then he went to his father's side. Commands and entreaties were of no avail; the boy remained, supporting the wounded man with an arm about his waist. The English sailors forgot the lust of battle, checked the fire, and cheered, and some of them went as the enemy ship settled lower in the water and finally disappeared beneath the waves.—Detroit News.

Ostrich Classified as an Error of Nature

The full-crown ostrich sometimes weighs more than 700 pounds and is as much as nine feet high, writes Martin Johnson in the Saturday Evening Post. His most marked characteristic is the fact that he is only two feet—the third and fourth—on each foot.

In South America there is another bird—the rheo—which is also called an ostrich. This bird can be distinguished from the true ostrich by its having three toes instead of two. According to the biologists the original ostrich had five toes. However, the modern bird can probably run faster with the two feet it now has than could his ancestors with five.

It is an interesting fact that the ostrich is the result of a union between the camel and a bird. It is a very odd mixture of the two. Its wings are useless, its neck is long and its legs are powerful. It is a very odd mixture of the two.

FARM BUREAU AT COLUMBUS PLANS TO MOVE OFFICE

Headquarters Of Ohio Federation To Occupy New Building Soon

Headquarters of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation will be moved to the new Farm bureau building in Columbus on May 26, according to word just received at the office of the Pickaway County Farm Bureau. This, the announcement states will give ample time to get all of the offices arranged and in operation before the dedication of the building which will take place June 12.

Local farm bureau officers are urging as large an attendance as possible from the members and farmers of this county.

An attempt is being made to get all of the founders and early leaders in the state farm bureau movement to Columbus for the building opening ceremonies, says the word from state headquarters. The first committee named to form the organization was appointed in 1918. A year later, on January 28, 1919, delegates from county farm bureaus elected the first directors of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation.

Of the nine directors chosen at that time, eight are living, and will be given honor places at the dedication exercises. These men are L. J. Taber, now master of the National Grange; George L. Cooley, of Dover Center, familiarly known to thousands of Ohio farmers as "father of the Ohio farm bureau"; Harry G. Beale of Columbus, for several years treasurer of the organization; H. C. Rogers of Champaign county, the first secretary; O. E. Bradford, former president of both the Ohio and American farm bureaus; H. P. Miller of Sunbury's Ohio's first county agricultural agent; Depeu Head of Columbus, and H. E. Shaver of Cheshire. Frank Balyeat of Van Wert, the other member of the original directorate, is deceased.

Speaking program at the building dedication will be held at 11 a.m. to be followed by luncheon at the new building.

MEG MALONE'S ADVICE

For a few months I have been going with a young man who seems to think a great deal of me and I like him very much. He is good looking and splendid company and seems well educated but he smokes incessantly and does not seem interested in church matters. I am afraid he will not measure up to my standard. What shall I do? PRISCILLA

Here is my answer: A maiden once said to her father: "The man I marry must neither smoke, drink, gamble nor swear. He must be industrious, affectionate, generous, sweet-tempered and truthful."

The father replied: "My dear, you're but a stranger here, Heaven is your home."

A great deal is said and written about the type of girl men choose for their wives.

It's all nonsense—the wiser and more particular a man is—the easier he is for some moon-eyed flapper to gather in. When love comes in at the heart common sense flies out of the cranium.

Then a few months after the knot is securely tied the man wakes up and finds him self fettered for life to a brainless mannequin. What's to be done? Divorce—probably or endless mortification and humiliation.

What a shame? Yes, but there is no remedy, for men have acted thus from prehistoric times and will continue so to act until Gabriel's horn ushers in the final judgment.

ALARM WAS FALSE

COLUMBUS, O., May 16.—"Another bank robbery!" That was the cry at police station here this morning when a burglar alarm call was received from the Commercial National bank in the heart of the downtown section here. Two police squads rushed to the scene. When they arrived at the bank they were told that James Guthrie, colored porter, had stepped on the alarm by mistake. The commanding sergeant reported back to his captain, "Just another false alarm."

Mrs. Hemans' Poem Had Foundation in Fact

Mrs. Hemans' poem, "The Boy Stood on the Burning Deck," which thrilled the imaginations, had its origin in an actual happening that constitutes a page in history. It was while Napoleon's expedition to Egypt was in progress that the English sent Lord Nelson, the sea's most famous warrior, to annihilate the fleet. This Nelson so nearly accomplished that only four of the French vessels escaped sinking or capture.

A bullet had ended the life of the French admiral, and the flagship was wrapped in flames. But Louis Casablanca, the captain, who was wounded so badly that he could keep his feet only by clinging desperately to the rail, stoutly refused to leave his post.

All who could get into a boat or swim had deserted the flagship and its heroic captain, with the solitary exception of a boy of ten—his son. The lad had hidden behind a coil of rope until the last boat had gone, and then he went to his father's side. Commands and entreaties were of no avail; the boy remained, supporting the wounded man with an arm about his waist. The English sailors forgot the lust of battle, checked the fire, and cheered, and some of them wept as the enemy ship settled lower in the water and finally disappeared beneath the waves.—Detroit News.

Ostrich Classified as an Error of Nature

The full-grown ostrich sometimes weighs more than 300 pounds and is as much as nine feet high, writes Martin Johnson in the Saturday Evening Post. His most marked characteristic is the fact that he has only two toes—the third and fourth—on each foot.

In South America there is another large bird—the rhea—which is also called an ostrich. This bird can be distinguished from the true ostrich by its having three toes instead of two. According to the biologists the original ostrich had five toes. However, the modern bird can probably run faster with the two it has now than could his ancestors with five.

Arabian legend has it that the ostrich is the result of a union between the camel and a dodo bird. Certainly it inherited some of the worst characteristics of both. Its awkward shape, the uselessness of its wings, its seeming lack of pleasure in life, all indicate that it is one of nature's errors.

The only weapon at the command of the ostrich is its foot. The terrible downward stroke of its huge toe driven by a muscular thigh the thickness of a leg of mutton is easily equal to the kick of a full-grown horse. A blow from it will break a rib or the backbone of any ordinary animal. In addition to the force of the blow, the sharp claw can tear skin and flesh like a military sabre.

CANDIDATES ARE FILING FOR BIG RACE IN COUNTY

Three Candidates After Clerk Of Courts Job—Others Line Up

The following candidates for county office have filed their applications for the August primaries: Frank Davis, who has served one term as sheriff, has filed for the office again. His position is signed by George H. Fickard, Fred H. Fissell, Abram Parrett, George F. Grand-Girard and Thomas A. Renick.

George Curry, who has served one term as county commissioner has filed for reelection at the coming primaries. His application is signed by James H. Kennedy, I. F. Snyder, W. Verner Grant, J. M. Borror and John W. Wilson.

A number of prospective candidates for county clerk and county surveyor, have announced their candidacy by distributing small cards, but as they have not filed their applications with accompanying signatures with the clerk of the board of elections, their names are not mentioned.

The only other applicant that has filed is Ray Z. Myers, who has filed for county surveyor. Mr. Myers name was mentioned in a previous report of applications filed, Mr. Myers has been employed in the office of the county surveyor for several years.

The office of county clerk seems to be very much sought after, and three candidates are pluming themselves for the office. One woman and two men, it is understood are after this plum.

Heroes of Legend

Most authorities agree that both Robin Hood and William Tell are legendary heroes, whose actual existence cannot be proved by any authentic documents. They first appear in popular ballads, Robin Hood in the latter part of the Fourteenth century and William Tell in the latter part of the Fifteenth century, though their exploits are dated much earlier.

GLENNA COLLETT ELIMINATED FROM GOLF TOURNEY

ENGLISH GOLF STAR WINNER OVER YANKEE

By FRANK A. WRAY
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
HUNTSVILLE, ALA., May 16.—Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd of Philadelphia was the only American to survive the fourth round of the British open golf championship, when in her first match today she defeated Miss Alice Borson, a fine English golfer, five up and three to play.

Long experience enabled Mrs. Hurd, who is a former American champion to overcome the severe weather conditions, a combination of wind and cold rain, and she was never off the fairway throughout the match.

Miss Glenna Collett, who was regarded as the leading American contender for the title following her defeat of Miss. Simone Thion De La Chaume, the holder in the first round, was defeated, three and two, by Miss Mabel Wragg, the Yorkshire champion.

Mrs. Stuart Hanley of Detroit was eliminated by Miss Molly Courlay, of England, seven and six; and Miss Joy Winn of England, defeated Miss Elizabeth Curtis of Clinton, Iowa, six and five.

Intense sympathy was expressed for Miss Collett when she returned to the club house after losing her match. Her face and hands were blue with cold and she was obviously suffering from a severe nervous strain.

Glenna Collett, chief hope of America to capture the British Women's golf championship, was eliminated from the tournament today, in a half gale of wind and rain, 3 and 2, by Miss Mabel Wragg, of England.

Miss Wragg, a Yorkshire girl, has been regarded as one of the best woman players in the north of England, but her defeat of the former American champion came as one of the big surprises of the tournament.

Miss Collett was one of the first to congratulate her conqueror, Miss Wragg. Meanwhile receiving the cheers of a large gallery, as she was immediately rated as a possible British champion and it appeared highly probable that this year's championship would remain in the British Isles.

First Use of Parachute

The invention of the parachute is attributed to Sebastian Leprand and the device was used by him in 1784 in making a descent from an upper window of a house in Lyon. The first ascent from a balloon was made by G. trouin in Paris in 1787.

Talking Parrots

The Mexican double yellow head is probably the best talking bird among our can parrots. This is probably copied to the African gray, which is the Old world favorite. Parrots must be taught to talk, while young. Other birds learn little and very slowly.

SPORTSMATTER

BY FRANK GETTY

Kentucky Derby week is the one of all the year closest to the hearts of turf enthusiasts. There are other stakes far richer, but no thoroughbred test in the United States quite holds the charm of that which takes place at Louisville next Saturday.

The lure of the blue grass country is calling irresistibly to thousands of race fans today, and those who said they would "pass it up this year" now are seeking about for transportation to "The Derby."

Traveling to Louisville is more complicated and luxurious these days than when the famous stakes were first contested back in the 19th century. Dozens of special trains will take turf followers from New York and Chicago, special boats will steam down the Ohio and airplanes will wing to Louisville from distant cities.

This year's Kentucky Derby is considered by sportsmen as an open event, "as wide open as the Atlantic Ocean," one turf critic has declared.

There have been Derby's in which a Kentucky horse has carried the money of the betters to such an extent that it has been an odds-on favorite when the barrier was sprung. This year's race will have a number of favorites, with plenty of money for backers of the winner.

Accommodations in the smoky, sleepy old Kentucky city are, of course, already at a premium. Louisville is preening itself to show its best Southern hospitality and graciousness to the hosts from outside.

As usual, there is rivalry between entries from the east and from the west. The former showed in the Preakness at Pimlico last Friday; many of the latter have been held in impatient abeyance for next Saturday's classic. One of the latter is Reigh Count, owned by Mr. and Mrs. John Hertz, which has been training smoothly and is likely to be one of the popular choices, if all goes well.

Reigh Count was the colt which got Earl Sande into trouble with the Maryland stewards, on the occasion of the running of the Pimlico Futurity last fall.

Sande had the leg up on Bateau, and was leading the field down the back stretch, when Reigh Count's jockey moved up along the rail. Just what happened never has been satisfactorily explained.

I was invited to study slow motion pictures of the race, for the purpose of determining whether Sande was guilty, as charged, of deliberately fouling the favorite. Unfortunately, the camera lens was not quite up to portraying the detail on the far side of the track, and the action was just a bit blurred.

There is no doubt but that Reigh Count reared and fell back a couple of lengths after making the move to pass Sande and Bateau on the rail. But whether America's premier jockey committed a deliberate foul or whether there was not sufficient room for Reigh Count to get through could not be determined from the movies.

The patrol judges believed Sande had reached out and barred Reigh Count's way, and as the Hertz entry was a hot favorite and probably "much the best," there was indignation and suspension.

GREENLEAF AHEAD

NEW YORK, May 16.—Ralph Greenleaf, pocket billiard champion today leads Andrew St. Jean by a score of 502 to 390 in their special match. Greenleaf won the third block, 119 to 71, in nine innings. St. Jean took the third block, which also lasted nine innings, by a score of 192 to 122.

PAYNE ALMOST CONCEDED BIG RACE WINNER

Youthful Oklahoman Heads Pack Of Pyle Runners Into New York

ERIE, PA., May 16.—C. C. "Cross Country" Pyle's brigade of blisters advanced into New York state today on their 63-mile trek to Jamestown, preparatory to the final sprints that will carry the ten leaders into the split on the $48,500 prize money at New York.

Andrew Payne, youthful Oklahoman who heads the big parade with an elapsed time of 476:57.40 for 2,890.9 miles, appears an almost certain winner, but still is reserved enough not to extend his palm for the $25,000 purse that is the victor's award.

"I remember what happened to Gavuzzi, just the other day," Payne said. "He had a comfortable lead over me. Then things went wrong and he was out. Before him Willie Koleihmann, Arthur Newton, Charley Hart, Ollie Wantinen and other great runners met misfortune. The last six hundred odd miles are the hardest. Anything may happen."

John Salo, Passaic, N. J. Finish-American, who holds second place, 21 hours, 49 minutes 27 seconds behind Payne, refused to divulge whether he calculated setting a pace aimed to "crack" his rival. "Payne has a nice edge," Salo said. "I'm still going ahead and hoping that I'll carry through somewhere in the money division."

I'M ABOUT TO LOSE SOME SLEEP

Along comes a letter from the home office saying May is National Delco-Light Demonstration Month.

And such being the case, I am urged to give as many of you folks as possible the opportunity to see what happens when bright, safe Delco-Light takes the place of dim and dangerous lamps and lanterns. Here is the way I do it. I drive out to your place with my demonstrating car, run a small wire from the Delco-Light on my car to your house and connect it to a portable table lamp. Then I sit back and say, "Just turn the switch."

Of course, I make these demonstrations at night, for Delco-Light, good as it is, can't compete with the sun. This means I lose a lot of sleep. But what I lose in sleep I make up with the fun I get out of giving you an evening of education and entertainment.

Well, May hath 27 working nights. That means I make 27 night demonstrations. Who's first? Write, phone, or call for appointment. No cost to you. No obligation. This is my party. You'll enjoy it.

P. S. Don't worry about not being a sleep. Charley, I'd lose it anyway.

GLENNA COLLETT ELIMINATED FROM GOLF TOURNEY

ENGLISH GOLF STAR WINNER OVER YANKEE

Only One American Woman
Entry In Meet

By FRANK A. WRAY
L. N. S. Staff Correspondent
HUNTSVILLE, ALA., May 16 — Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd of Philadelphia was the only American to survive the fourth round of the British open golf championship, when in her first match today she defeated Miss Alice Borson, a fine English golfer, five up and three to play.

Long experience enabled Mrs. Hurd, who is a former American champion to overcome the severe weather conditions, a combination of wind and cold rain, and she was never off the fairway throughout the match.

Miss Glenna Collett, who was regarded as the leading American contender for the title following her defeat of Mlle. Simone Thion De La Chaume, the holder in the first round, was defeated, three and two, by Miss Mabel Wragg, the Yorkshire champion.

Mrs. Stuart Hanley of Detroit was eliminated by Miss Molly Courlay, of England, seven and six; and Miss Joy Winn of England, defeated Miss Elizabeth Curtis of Clinton, Iowa, six and five.

Intense sympathy was expressed for Miss Collett when she returned to the club house after losing her match. Her face and hands were blue with cold, and she was obviously suffering from a severe nervous strain.

A SINCLAIRIZED SYSTEM

Now that the late-lamented Sinclair trial has slipped far enough into the past for us to look at it in the proper perspective, it might be a good thing for us to study it, as a scientist would study some strange bug he had found in his test tube, and see what it means. It has been said, for instance, that it means that America cannot convict a man with a million dollars; that our jury system is a failure, and that the government cannot possibly gain a conviction in the District of Columbia.

Are these the real meanings of the famous trial? On the surface it looks as if they are. Yet a little thought will disclose another portent underlying all of these secondary indications; a thing more dismaying than these, calling for prompt, drastic action.

Our court machinery, it would seem, is almost hopelessly complicated. It defeats its own end. A major criminal trial loses sight of its real function, which is to determine the guilt or innocence of the accused party; it becomes a game, conducted according to elaborate, intricate rules, which no layman can ever quite comprehend. In the Sinclair case the prosecution was not allowed to introduce certain vital evidence—not because that evidence had no bearing on the question of Sinclair's guilt or innocence, but because its introduction would have been contrary to the rules of the game.

Under these rules Sinclair was not required to utter one word of explanation and defense; more, the jury was not even permitted to hold his silence against him. The jury was not allowed to know what the supreme court thought of the whole mess. After the trial one juror admitted his amazement to read in the newspapers facts which were never presented in court.

What does all of this mean—if not that our legal machinery is crying to heaven for revision? Can any other interpretation possibly be placed on it? Is it not time that we stopped considering a criminal trial a fascinating game for high priced lawyers and made it a trustworthy process for settling the question of a man's guilt or innocence?

The lawyers of the country would seem to have a responsibility in the matter. Through their bar associations they wield a great influence on the laws that govern court procedure. Cannot they speak out and begin working for a change? Or is the game, as now conducted, more lucrative than it might be if simplified?

OTHER AMERICANS

A Canadian paper repeats the old protest against applying the word, "American" exclusively to citizens of the United States. It points out, with justice, that citizens of Canada, Brazil or Chile can just as logically apply the word to themselves.

Many attempts have been made to find a word for the United States, and all have failed. During the war the British solved the difficulty by calling all United States troops "Yanks"—although they probably didn't imagine how that would sound to soldiers from Alabama or Texas. Someone once suggested "Yanks," but that is a hybrid that doubtless will never gain favor.

We'll probably go on saying "Americans," but we might remember that our neighbors to the north and south use the name as well as we can. Why can't some of the bright young men who are advertising names and slogans do something about it? Surely, it ought to be possible to find a word that would strike public fancy and avoid wounding the pride of other American nations.

What If You Fail?

What if you fail?

To win your goal?
What if you've lost,
A broken soul,
What if the grave
Is yawning wide
If you have worked,
Sincerely tried?
Too many mourn
Because they think
Their life is Just
Upon the brink
Ready to fall
Into the sea
While Fate laughs in
Its cruel glee,
But if back of the Trail your feet
Have trod
Sweet,
If you have made a
Friend today
Along the paths of God's highway,
If you have really
Tried to win
Why, losing then
Is not a sin—

And what we mean to say
Is,
Ah, true it is we
All can't win,
But sometimes Vic-try's
Very thin,
If say, perchance, a
Friend you've lost,
Well, then, is triumph
Worth the cost?
Is getting gold
And winning
Power
The only thing you
Seek this hour?
Say to yourself,
"What matters wealth
If in the rush
I lost myself?"

Well, Mother's Day is over and a lot of children will forget her until next year.

We presume that love is grand and last week we know of a girl who didn't smoke a single cigarette for seven whole days simply because she thought her best fellow was a little old-fashioned and might not like it.

Dolores Costello in "OLD SAN FRANCISCO" is a Warner Bros. picture.

SYNOPSIS
Buckwell, San Francisco's boss politician, with lawyer, Brandon, attempted to get possession of Vasquez ranch, occupied by Vasquez and his beautiful granddaughter. Their plot is discovered by Dolores, Terry, Brandon's nephew, who loves Dolores. Terry and Dolores have misunderstanding. Dolores falls into Buckwell's clutches but is saved by Terry. Buckwell uses force to oust Vasquez, but is defeated. He tries to kill Dolores, but Terry's saving and conquers Buckwell. The aged Senator dies from stroke caused by Buckwell's threats. Dolores, left alone, discovers that Buckwell is Chinaman in disguise. She plans to avenge her grandfather's death. Tells Terry, Buckwell is Chinaman.

"And that would be a crime!" he objected quickly. "Your hair is too splendid to be covered. No, on second thought, I love you most without anything to cover your hair." But the look in his eyes indicated that if she were a mussed sunbonnet he would love her just the same.

Dolores was slightly abashed by such ardent admiration, although she found herself wanting him to say lovelike words and hold her hand forever. Nothing else could keep back the sobs and bring momentary forgetfulness of the fact that her grandfather was dead.

"The Chinamen we are going to see," asked Dolores curiously, "what will they do to Senator Buckwell?"

"I don't know just what, but they will make it pretty uncomfortable for him. In fact, it will be the last of Buckwell as a power in Frisco." "It should be! He can't take the ranch away from us now, can he?" It was a new and hopeful thought.

"There is nothing he can do unless he locks up and under guard, and we know that he is trying to have the old Spanish grants declared invalid. By the way, I have not had a chance to tell you—my uncle is no longer doing Buckwell's legal work." There was a ring of pride in Terry's voice.

"Oh, Terry, I am glad," cried Dolores impulsively, for his sake and for her own, because she knew what a heartache the combine had been to him. "What made him give it up?"

Her eyes searched his so trustfully that he could not lie. "Why—why, I told about what a rotten Buckwell had been to you, and uncle also found out that Buckwell had double crossed him on a deal, so he said he was 'through.' I hope he meant it. I believe he did."

Again they rode on in silence. "You seem so far away," complained Terry from his corner of the carriage. "What I come near?" Dolores was elusively desirable, and he was fearful of startling her. "Yes—you may," she replied so faintly that if he had not already moved nearer he could not have heard.

She was uncomfortably happy. There is such a state when one is in love. She had never wanted Don Luis to even kiss her finger tips. She hated to have him call her "sweet Senorita," and he always did! She dreaded being left alone with him, and his sentimental flattery annoyed her. But with Terry it was different. She craved his touch and drank in his every word and gesture. She liked every thing he did and said, and after they reached her grandfather's death she would ask nothing more from life than to be with him.

It was what Terry wanted, too, and as the carriage drew into the radiance of San Francisco's lights he asked eagerly, "Do you want to see my new car?" then he hesitated to add before she had time to answer, "Don't say later than a month or I can't stand it. I want you for my very own, dear—now!" And I want you to have me!" replied Dolores. Their eyes locked.

see," asked Dolores curiously, "what will they do to Senor Buckwell?"

"I don't know just what, but they will make it pretty uncomfortable for him. In fact, it will be the last of Buckwell as a power in Frisco."

"It should be! He can't take the ranch away from us now, can he?" It was a new and hopeful thought.

"There is nothing he can't do unless he is locked up and under guard, and we know that he is trying to have the old Spanish grants declared invalid. By the way, I have not had a chance to tell you—my uncle is no longer doing Buckwell's legal work." There was a ring of pride in Terry's voice.

"Oh, Terry, I am glad," cried Dolores impulsively, more for his sake than her own, because she knew what a heartache the combine had been to him. "What made him give it up?"

Her eyes searched his so trustfully that he could not lie.

"Why—why, I told about what a rotter Buckwell had been to you, and uncle also found out that Buckwell had double crossed him on a deal, so he said he was 'through.' I hope he meant it. I believe he did."

Again they rode on in silence. "You seem so far away," complained Terry from his corner of the carriage, "may I come nearer?" Dolores was elusively desirable, and he was fearful of startling her.

"Yes—you may," she replied so faintly that if he had not already moved nearer he could not have heard.

She was uncomfortably happy. There is such a state when one is in love. She had never wanted Don Luis to even kiss her finger tips. She hated to have him call her "sweet Senorita," and he always did. She dreaded being left alone with him, and his sentimental flattery annoyed her. But with Terry it was different. She craved his touch and drank in his every word and gesture. She liked everything he did and said, and after grandfather's death she would ask nothing more from life than to be with him.

It was what Terry wanted, too, and as the carriage drew into the radiance of San Francisco's lights he asked earnestly, "Dolores, when will you marry me?" then he hastened to add before she had time to answer, "Don't say later than a month or I can't stand it. I want you for my very own, dear—soon!"

"And I want you to have me!" replied Dolores. Their eyes melted into each other's. "I could not have lived through the last few days if it had not been for you."

"God bless you, my darling. But when will you marry me?" "Almost any time, Terry. I don't think it would be disrespectful to grandfather's memory. It is so lonely at the rancho alone, and if Senor Buckwell takes it away from me I wouldn't know what to do."

"Look here!" commanded Terry with a fine show of sternness, "are you going to marry me just for the sake of having a roof over your head?"

"You know I am not," replied Dolores with dignity. "I am going to marry you because—I love you." And she looked at him with such an adorably sweet expression that he wanted to crush her in his arms and never let her go.

"That is the best time you have said it, sweetheart! Glory, but it is so great!"

At this point in their conversation they drew up to the entrance of Lu Fong's Cafe. Their quest for the head of the inner Circle had led them to the threshold of as dangerously famous a haunt as existed within the Golden Gate.

"Wait until we return," Terry instructed the driver. They entered the dimly lighted cafe.

Dolores appeared as out of place as an exquisite orchid in a rank weed patch. She instinctively recoiled. Terry took her arm reassuringly.

"Don't worry, dear; we will not have to stay here long. Lu Fong has an office some place in the building. I will find out how we get to him."

Still holding her protectively by the arm, Terry beckoned to a waiter. As the white aproned servitor approached Terry said, "We must see Lu Fong at once; it is important."

The waiter stuck his shiny black tray under his arm and eyed Dolores with interest. "I'll pass on the word. I don't know much about the inner workings of the place myself. Take a seat while you're waiting," and, indicating a small table near the doorway, he went out whistling.

Dolores looked slowly around the enormous cafe room. It was filled with a crowd representing almost every nationality and every type of life. Some had come because it was a habit, others out of curiosity. The cafe was a good place in which to indulge one's appetites, no matter of what nature they chanced to be. Chinese waiters were scurrying about serving food.

One side of the room was lined with partially secluded booths, from which issued either no sound at all or a volume of voices. The opposite wall was backed with French plate mirrors and an elaborate mirrored bar. It was with a doubt the most active section of the entire room. Although Lu Fong's was a Chinese cafe, tea was seldom ordered. Plain American beer and whisky were the popular beverages, and they were served in great profusion. Whisky was bought by the barrel and was a tremendous source of graft for some of the white bosses.

The cafe bar was a room of many doors. To all who gave the matter their consideration it was easily observed that one door never opened into the room. It was an exit only, but bore no label. What happened to the people who crossed its threshold at rare intervals was a source of much speculation.

Those who came out, by another exit, never told of their experiences, while still others never reappeared to give an account of themselves. It led to a certain back room and from thence down, down into the maze of underground passages where one was as lost as in the labyrinth of Corinth without a guide.

Singing entertainers, both men and women, worked their way through the aisles or paused at a table now and then to help along the general hilarity of the evening, which had not yet reached its height.

Dolores shuddered and turned away as she saw a young white girl having dinner with an apparently wealthy Chinese merchant. There was a lustful gleam in the man's eyes, and the girl put her hand in his with a significant look and calmed laughter that meant their evening together was just beginning.

It reminded Dolores of her encounter with Buckwell, and she wondered how any girl could endure the three trips to the Barbary Coast were awakening her mind to life as it was lived by people who did not care or whose ideals were of an entirely different calibre from her own.

Looking away from the ill suited couple, Dolores noticed a man—all alone at a neighboring table. He was laughing and going through the motions of making an imaginary something—animal perhaps—sit up and jump over his finger. She wondered why his face should be so white and pinched.

TO FLY TO AMERICA

LONDON, May 16—Capt. Frank T. Courtney, British ace, is expected to hop off for America in a sea boat just as soon as weather conditions permit, it was learned this afternoon. Courtney has been making secret preparations for the flight and is said to have his arrangements practically perfected. There will be three persons in the plane.

Preaching and Practice

"Oh, the sin of lying, of exaggeration!" cried the speaker as he warmed up. "Would that I could tell you the number of times I have shed barrels and barrels of tears over it."

Idle Women

There are millions of idle men, but I think the good Lord there is still some objection to them. . . . But there is no objection to idle women. . . . And how many millions there are of them! We regard our idle women as a fine tribute to our gallantry, but the naked truth is they are our greatest disgrace. . . . —E. W. Howe's Magazine.

The subject being Child Welfare, (mothers and children's meeting) Mrs. Gray read Prov., 13 chapter and prayed a very appropriate prayer. Reading of the minutes and roll call by Ellen Peck. "Every Day Builders," a very interesting paper was read by Mrs. Mary Gray. She said in part. We are all builders of our own characters, structures more important than any fashioned by human hands. And the work goes on day after day. It is for us to choose what kind of plan, or in other words what kind of person we are going to be. Our daily experiences will be the tools with which to build, and the spirit which we meet them is really what counts. Strength of character, just like muscular strength, will be developed by overcoming difficulties, not by following the path of least resistance someone has wisely said, "You can not dream yourself into a character, you must hammer and forge yourself one." Others participating in the program were Beatrice Slagle, Emma Jennings, Anna Harriman and Edyth Cleary. Refreshments of nut sundae, cake and iced tea was served by the hostess.

Chemistry Popular Study

Since the war there are more persons engaged in the pursuit of chemistry than any other science. This is due in particular to the rapid establishment of chemical industries in the United States to supply materials which had formerly been imported entirely.

Electrical Executions

The reason that electrocutions take place in the late afternoon or evening is that during the day the convicts are working and are not in their cells. A pending execution in a penitentiary exerts a depressing influence over the convicts, and to avoid any outbreak or manifestation on their part the hour is deferred until the prisoners are in their individual cells.

'Miss Cherry Blossom' Is To Be
Given Two Nigh ts At High School

"MISS Cherry Blossom" a musical comedy will be presented at the High School auditorium Thursday and Friday evenings of this week.

As the name implies the story and setting are Japanese.

Cherry Blossom, as played by Eleanor Snyder is a delightful character--supposedly Japanese--Geisha girls--a chorus of fourteen, who serve tea to the Americans at Kokomo's tea house. Foremost among the American tourists is Jack, played by Howard Greeno, who straightaway falls in love with Cherry Blossom, and thereby upsets Kokomo's (Elliott Barnhill's) plans to marry his foster daughter to Togo (Carl Palm) the leading politician and big mogul of the community.

Then there are others of the Americans, Jessica and Harry, (Katherine Groom and Foster Bales) whose love story is the secondary plot. Worthington and James (Dudley Carpenter and Herman Compton) two American business men of middle age, are off for a vacation. It is from their conversation early in the play that the main plot is made known.

All of these with the choruses add much to the attractiveness of the production.

The lines throughout are clever and the musical numbers snappy and tuneful.

The training of the choruses and solo parts, also the dancing has been under the direct supervision of Miss Helen K. Wittich, while the speaking parts have been coached by Mr. Wylie Fetherlin.

The present production is of the same high class type as the "Pirate's Daughter" and "Gypsy Rover" which were so successfully presented by the High school two and three years ago.

POLO'S AT MET Why didn't anybody make a polo story before?

That is the first reaction of anyone seeing William Haines in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Smart Set," now playing at the Metropolitan theatre.

Polo seems perfectly adapted to pictures. It has everything—thrills, color, struggle, romance, and even comedy. As shown in "The Smart Set," it bids fair to gain wide popularity in the United States, rivaling in popular interest its two great rivals, football and baseball.

One doesn't need to understand the sport to appreciate the picture—understanding follows inevitably in the first three minutes of contest. The story is that of the struggle between the British and American polo teams for International cup which was staged last year at Meadowbrook club on Long Island. It is laid against a background of "The Smart Set" portrayed perhaps for the first time on the screen as real people with understandable loves, aims and passions.

Concerning "Tightwads"

You are a tightwad, says a government budget expert, if your living expenses are 37 per cent of your income, your savings 60 per cent and the remaining 3 per cent scattered among recreation, education and philanthropy. You are a spendthrift if your living expenses are 73 per cent, your savings zero, your recreation 49 per cent. You are thrifty if your living expenses are 50 per cent, your savings 20 per cent, education, giving and recreation 10 per cent.

It's a pleasure to meet a budget maker who emphasizes some necessities of human living besides savings only, and who will not give the palm to the fellow who saves the most—Kansas City Times.

First "Weather-Glass"

The first mercurial barometer was constructed chiefly for the purpose of demonstrating the fact that air has weight, says Nature Magazine. Later this instrument acquired a great reputation as a means of predicting weather and was nicknamed the "weather glass." Though its prophetic powers are not now rated so high as formerly, it remains the most important of meteorological instruments. The column of mercury in the barometer rises and falls with changes of atmospheric pressure, and its length is measured by means of an attachment called a "vernier," with a much greater refinement of accuracy than is that of the column of mercury or alcohol in a thermometer.

Naval Range Finder

An accurate method of computing the distance between ships when the height of the enemy ship is not known is by the use of the optical range finder. This instrument is installed in the turrets of battle ships. It consists of a long tube with optical prisms. The length of the tube is taken as the base of a triangle. The distance is then figured out mathematically. The degree of accuracy depends upon the visibility conditions and the distance can usually be ascertained within a few hundred yards of the exact distance.

Dad's Smile Evaporated

The slangy young woman was holding a conversation with her mother and dad. In the course of the talk when something which they told her surprised her exceedingly, she exclaimed: "Well, I'm a monkey's uncle."

Mother remonstrated, but dad was highly amused and said jokingly: "My dear, you could never be a monkey's uncle—now you might be a monkey's aunt."

"But, dad," said the slangy one, putting an affectionate hand on his arm. "Wouldn't you rather have me say 'I'm a monkey's uncle,' than 'I'm a monkey's pup'?" And the slangy young lady beat a hasty retreat.

581 and 782'Miss Cherry Blossom' Is To Be Given Two Nights At High School

"MISS Cherry Blossom" a musical comedy will be presented at the High School auditorium, Thursday and Friday evenings of this week.

As the name implies the story and setting are Japanese.

Cherry Blossom, as played by Eleanor Snyder is a delightful character—supposedly Japanese—Geisha girls—a chorus of fourteen, who serve tea to the Americans at Kokomo's tea house. Foremost among the American tourists is Jack, played by Howard Greene, who straightway falls in love with Cherry Blossom, and thereby upsets Kokomo's (Elliott Barnhill's) plans to marry his foster daughter to Togo (Carl Palm) the leading politician and big mogul of the community.

Then there are others of the Americans, Jessica and Harry, (Katherine Groom and Foster Bales) whose love story is the secondary plot. Worthington and James (Dudley Carpenter and Herman Compton) two American business men of middle age, are off for a vacation. It is from their conversation early in the play that the main plot is made known.

All of these with the choruses add much to the attractiveness of the production.

The lines throughout are clever and the musical numbers snappy and tuneful.

The training of the choruses and solo parts, also the dancing has been under the direct supervision of Miss Helen K. Wittich, while the speaking parts have been coached by Mr. Wylie Fetherlin.

The present production is of the same high class type as the "Pirate's Daughter" and "Gypsy Rover" which were so successfully presented by the High school two and three years ago.

THEATERS

"THE HEART OF SALOME" With Alma Rubens as the star the above titled picture comes to the Grand opera house tonight. Flaming passions and burning hearts—a strong man and a beautiful woman suffering through hate into a steadfast love.

POLO'S AT MET Why didn't anybody make a polo story before?

That is the first reaction of anyone seeing William Haines in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Smart Set," now playing at the Metropolitan theatre.

Polo seems perfectly adapted to pictures; it has everything—thrills, color, struggle, romance, and even comedy. As shown in "The Smart Set," it bids fair to gain wide popularity in the United States, rivaling in popular interest its two great rivals, football and baseball.

One doesn't need to understand the sport to appreciate the picture—understanding follows inevitably in the first three minutes of contest. The story is that of the struggle between the British and American polo teams for International cup which was staged last year at Meadowbrook club on Long Island. It is laid against a background of "The Smart Set" portrayed perhaps for the first time on the screen as real people with understandable loves, aims and passions.
